Continuing its outreach to the investment community, LiquidTalk is selected as one of six Midwest startups to exhibit at Silicon Valley's prestigious Venture Forum

CHICAGO, IL, June 28, 2006 – Today LiquidTalk Networks announced its participation in Silicon Valley's prestigious Venture Forum Conference. The Venture Forum is the country's largest - and longest running - showcase of innovation and entrepreneurship (www.theventureforum.com).

LiquidTalk was selected as one of ten promising high tech Midwest-based startups to Exhibit at this year's conference, being held June 28-29th. During the conference, hundreds of venture capitalists, angels, corporate investors and leading service providers from across the globe will gather in Silicon Valley to discover the most groundbreaking seed and early-stage investment opportunities and to engage with expert panels on innovation.

Since its inception in 1995, the Venture Forum has successfully showcased the nation's top innovative & investment-worthy technologies. Companies that present at the Venture Forum are rigorously reviewed & mentored by an elite panel of investors and subject matter experts. Venture Forum has been associated with several strong trends in innovation, in areas ranging from media and communications to ecommerce and nanotechnology.

LiquidTalk cofounder Dan Anderson comments: "We were excited to be chosen for this year's Venture Forum. Attendees include policymakers, VC investors, and corporate licensing executives scouting for innovative technologies, so we see the conference as a great showcase to get our message out about LiquidTalk's enterprise solution leveraging digital media for sales enablement and employee communication."
